WowFight Night

What an amazing feeling to know that I have just done 3 rounds in the ring. What an even more amazing feeling that I have so much I can learn from here and can keep fighting. Joe – thank you so much for organizing fight night. It was a lot of fun and I loved the opportunity! How do I describe this feeling? If you read my blog regularly you would know that rarely am I lost for words but today might be just that. The buzz of excitement and adrenalin is still going. I woke up smiling thinking about it. To think that just 2 years ago I would never have imagined that I could be in the ring and that the difference is just so huge. Last night I was at home. Comfortable, relaxed, happy. I feel like someone has handed me the winning lottery ticket. One of the other amazing things about fight night is having a big group of friends come to watch. To support me as I took on another goal. I am so grateful for the support and it made fight night even more special. - Excerpts taken from Kate Ridges Blog to read the full article and more about Kate's journey <http://thistimeican.wordpress.com/2014/11/16/wow-fight-night/>.

Another from Anita "The Fox' Fox—Feeling slightly accomplished this morning. Can't wipe the goddam smile off my face. Thankyou all for your support, encouragement, and for sharing your passion and knowledge of boxing with me. Had a great night. xo.

This year was the sixth year we have done our fight night and is the most important event on our calendar. The Black shirt graduation test is a unique experience and probably one of the highlights of people's lives who have experienced it. Although it is only a first step in your martial arts / boxing journey it is a pretty significant first step. If you missed it make sure you get to next year's.

The crew with their Black Shirts and trophies your turn next year !

I am leaving the auction room open for a couple of weeks for people to either bid or buy the items left over from fight night. You can bid in person or online just follow the link to fight night some items are shown below.

The Man vs The Money - Anthony Mundine the comeback kid

Talk about silence the critics, everybody including the bookies wrote Anthony Mundine off, but relish the tag of underdog he did with an absolute blinder of a fight against knockout artist Sergey Rabchenko and he has given himself a chance at arguably the best pound for pound fighter ever, the undefeated 47-0 Floyd Mayweather whose management have indicated they may be in the ring as soon as early 2015. I personally think that matchup would be great and that Mundine is one of the only fighters around who could possibly disturb Floyd but time will tell.

Congratulations to our own Alec (Will) Doomadgee (Above RHS) who won the ABL NSW Masters Heavyweight State title on the 8th November with a 3rd round stoppage of a very experienced opponent. Will has been living out of Sydney this year but still performed superbly and could be a very long reign as champion. Also look out for his movie called Zac's Ceremony about his son Zac (also Joe's student) journey to manhood it will be extraordinary.

Canale Tax and Accounting

Thanks to our Sponsors Fight Night 2014

This fight night marked a milestone with our first outside the school sponsor coming aboard and I am very grateful to Nicole Canale owner of Canale Tax and Accounting just up in Five Dock for helping us and I would like if students repay the favour and use their services if in need of an accountant as you know the inevitable Death & Taxes.

Finally my dear friend Enrico Indorato who was again a participant last year has continually for the last few years supplied us with trays of finger food always more than we can eat. Enrico has the Family Brasserie at the Canada Bay Club the corner of William St & Lyons Road some 300 metres from our school.
